This curriculum represents a collaborative effort by the partners of the National Child Welfare Workforce Institute (NCWWI)—University at Albany, University of Denver, University of Maryland, Michigan State University, Portland State University, and University of Southern Maine.

Production of this web-based curriculum was a team effort involving several dedicated individuals on the LAS Team at USM: Freda Bernotavicz, Sue Ebersten, Crystal French, Lee Lauritsen, DeeDee Reardon, Gretchen Robbins, and Marshall Soloway.

Thanks to the original NCWWI team members who provided input from 2008-2010 on the design process. Members of the NCWWI LINKD team, particularly Nancy McDaniel, Sara Munson, Charmaine Brittain and Sharon Koller at the University of Denver were particularly helpful in identifying relevant resources and in providing feedback. We are grateful to Nancy Dickinson of the University of Maryland for her narration and input. Thanks also to the LAS graduates across the country who have provided valuable feedback that guided our 2014 revisions and enhancements.

The NCWWI is funded through a Cooperative Agreement with U.S. DHHS, Administration for Children and Families, Children's Bureau, Award No. 90CT7002. Special thanks to Randi Walters, former Children's Bureau Project Officer, Melinda Baldwin, current Children's Bureau Project Officer and Robert Lindecamp, Child Welfare Program Specialist (CB/ICF), for their support.
